Since the council moved out of the Guildhall in April 2013 it has been working to find the best option to secure its future. In October 2015 the council's Executive resolved that a business club and serviced office venue, with ongoing council use and supporting commercial development would be the best mix of uses to secure a viable future for the complex. Work has now begun to review previous feasibility work and to develop detailed design proposals and this event is the first opportunity for public views to feed into the design process.

York's Guildhall is a key building in the City, and one which is strongly associated with its history and development. The Guildhall is also directly associated with the governance of the City. York has an outstanding Civic archive which records over 800 years of the City's history, charting many events and the people associated with them. The construction of the present Guildhall in 1445 and some of the changes made to it since that time are well documented.

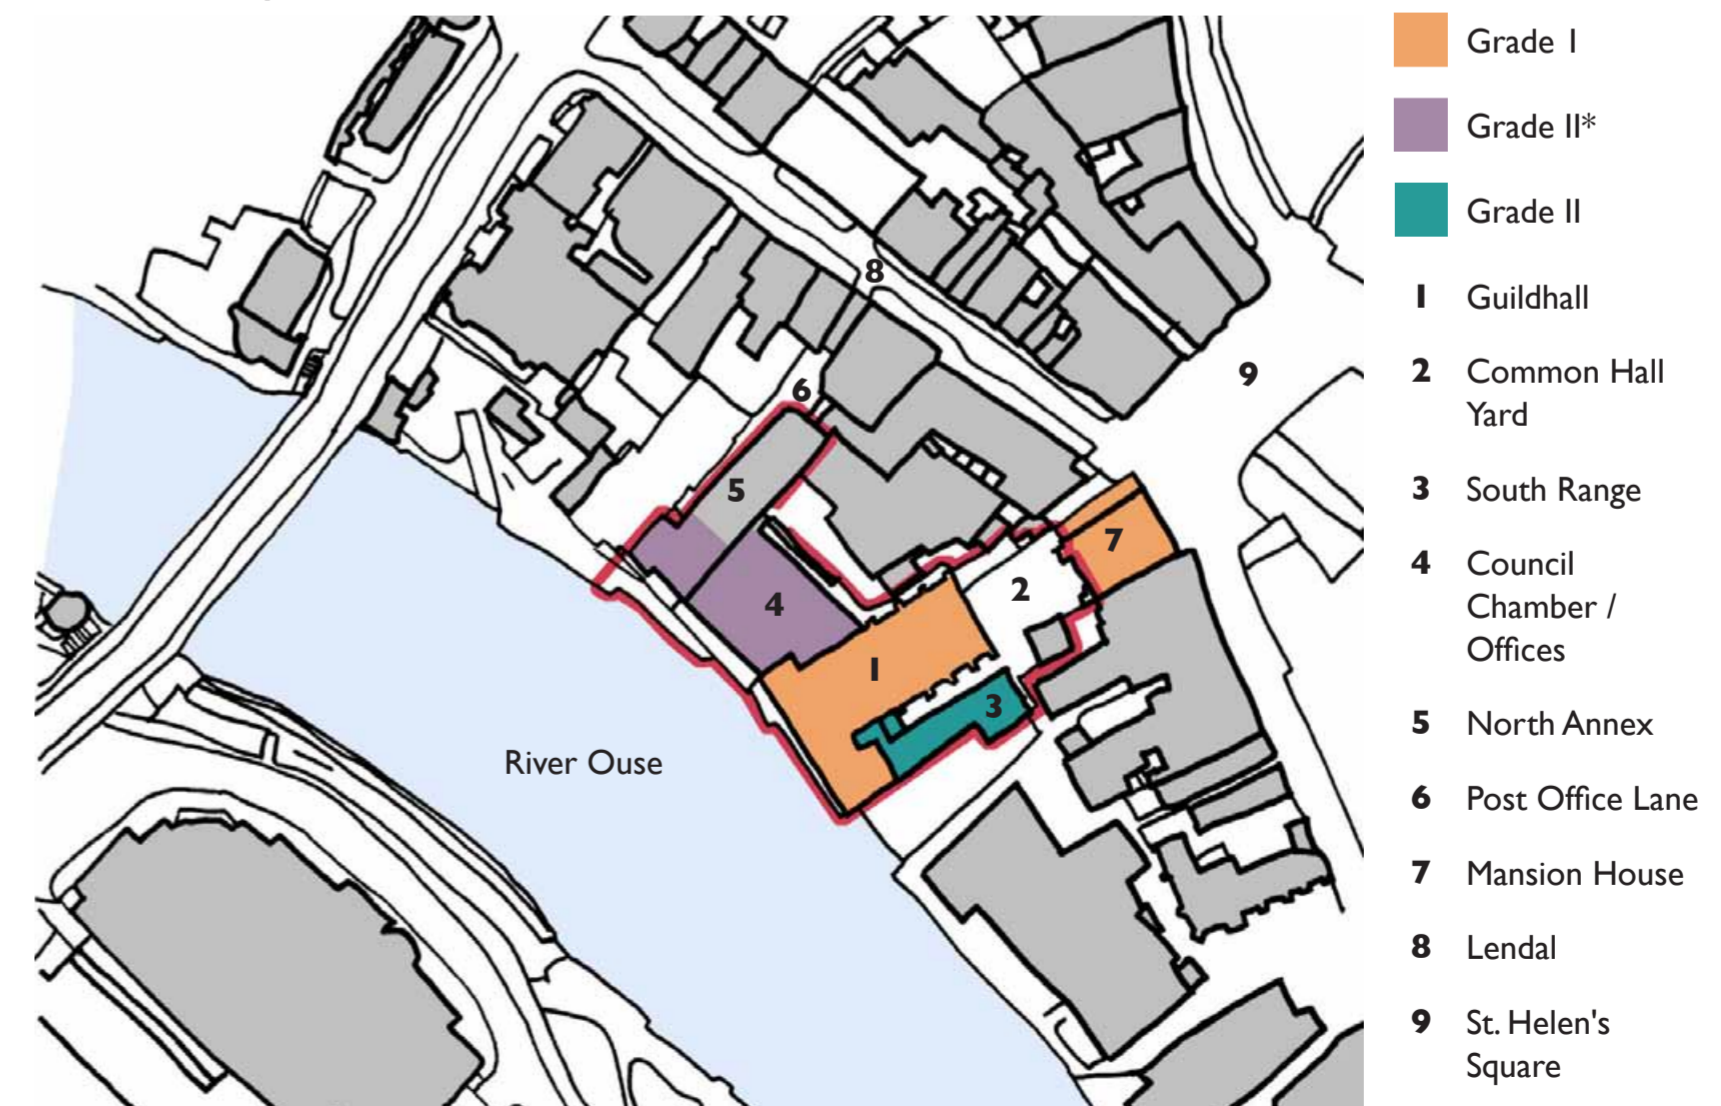

York prospered through the regulation of the trade by the Guilds who jointly funded the construction of the Guildhall with the 'council'. The Guildhall has seen governance of the City by the freemen and aldermen, a sheriff dispensing justice in his court, a Lord Mayor and civic leaders, and latterly modern democratic governance by the city corporation / council. The 'new' council offices incorporating the council chamber were completed in 1891. Overtime with further additions the council came to occupy a large and 'rambling' complex on the riverside.

The Guildhall buildings are now largely empty and under used. The council chamber is still used for full council meetings – every other month – and the Guildhall itself is still used for events. However, the remainder of the space (former offices) is largely vacant and empty. The buildings are in need of repair / improvement and new use.

This proposal was seen as an appropriate re-use option, compatible with the heritage of the complex and maintaining the close links between commerce and governance that have existed throughout its history.

The design phase has progressed, but much of the complex will remain the same with sensitive and appropriate refurbishments. There will be new elements, which have been carefully considered as part of the York riverside and designed to improve access / accessibility.

SIGNIFICANCES 'MIND MAP'

PUBLIC SPACE, ACCESS & SERVICING

ROUTES & CONNECTIVITY

- The diverse functions on site dictates different entry points.
- The Restaurant and Café will have separate independent entrances, as will the Guildhall for formal and informal use.
- The existing entrance to the Council Offices is highly compromised and the sensitive re-modelling of this area (particularly the interface with the Guildhall itself) is proposed.
- An appropriate entrance point to the workplace areas has been accommodated, which includes necessary ancillary reception spaces.
- The proposals will continue York's riverfront walkways from the City Screen Picturehouse site through the Guildhall Complex and ultimately on to the York Boat Site and beyond.
- There will be challenges in achieving access / services requirements.

PUBLIC SPACE

- The Guildhall Complex is defined by a continuation of spaces defining a public realm. These link the river front space between the Guildhall and the City Screen Picturehouse to the South, through Common Hall Yard in front of the Guildhall.
- The creation to the new raised landscaped space on the Hutments site allows this route to continue through the North Annexe and beyond in the future.
- Each public space will have its own character, with an appropriate mixture of hard and soft landscape to create another layer of richness to the matrix of public space within the city centre.

COUNCIL CHAMBER

ACCESS FOR FULL COUNCIL MEETINGS

For use by City of York Council of the Council Chamber:

The Guildhall is one of York's most significant buildings - it has been at the heart of the City's governance for over 800 years & the council's HQ/office base for over 200 years.

When the council relocated to new offices in 2013 it was resolved that use of the Council Chamber for full council meetings would continue.

By retaining use of the Council Chamber and enhancing public access, the importance of direct links between the city's governance, commerce, and culture are not just acknowledged, but remain intrinsically bound together, for the future benefit of the city, in this world class historic location.

To support the continuing use of the Council Chamber consideration will be given to:

- Securing accessible access for Members, press and public from access to the office and co-working areas and to the Guildhall;
- Providing toilet provision without compromising security of other areas of the Guildhall.

As a base line the requirement for City of York Council use will include 6 no. full council meetings (alternate monthly) in the council chamber.

SPACES THAT WILL REMAIN AVAILABLE FOR FULL COUNCIL MEETINGS

- The Council Chamber
- Meeting Room
- Cloaks / Lobby

OTHER USES FOR WHICH THE SPACES WILL BE AVAILABLE WHEN NOT REQUIRED FOR COUNCIL MEETINGS

The existing Council Chamber will be retained in their traditional roles but also to offer exceptional events spaces, such as theatre productions, debates further enhancing the excellent facilities of the site.

The development will also include opportunities to integrate commercial offers to further complement the site's unique facilities, making it a primary location for businesses to operate, meet and network within the historic city centre.
